“ I have so many fond memories of my aunt. She and her family would visit us in Arlington, Virginia, and we would see them on East Capital Street. I also remember the time she and I took a furniture refinishing/upholstering class together at Crossland High School. We enjoyed each other's company while working on projects—our mutual love for poetry and family history. I looked forward to spending time with the Little family at her annual Christmas breakfasts. Though there was a sixteen-year difference in age, she and Mama were very close, and I appreciated that she would call her almost daily to check up on her and talk about their days in Laurens. Grief can be a love gone cold, but the memories of Aunt Doris will always warm my soul:

A Family Leaf

*A leaf on a mature tree is striking to behold
Daily absorbs its nutrients from the sun's rays
A rushing wind tries to carry it away in its folds
It hangs on by a stem and does not blow away*

*On a family tree, a leaf ages and no longer exists
Its short life span comes to a seasonal demise
The tips begin to decay, for it cannot resist
Cascading downward as the family tree cries*

*In sorrow, the great family tree mourns its loss
With a single leaf, the ancestry is easy to trace
No leaf is perfect; it possesses its natural flaws
When alive, so much love held it safely in place*
