“ I was a friend of Jermaine's in Boston during the 90's while he was at Emerson and I was working for a retired professor as live-in help. He and I would go out together. The last time I saw him was in the Spring of 2003. He invited me over to his place in Arlington. We drove around town and went out to a couple clubs. He had me listen to a few tracks he was working on. I'll never forget that Pet Shop Boys mix he made - it was amazing. He was so kind. I didn't read about his death until a few days ago - 10 years, that's a long time - but I was shocked and saddened. I always took it for granted I could just look him up next time I was in the area. And I thought I might be able to tempt him to visit me here in Morocco someday. I will really miss him. He had a really good, unassuming nature. What more can you ask of a person? I salute you, Jermaine.
