“ I met Jobe while walking past him in Washington about five years ago. We stayed in touch regularly, laughing, crying, and praying together.

A month or so after his cancer diagnosis, I stopped hearing from him. Then, during my morning run on July 28, I felt through the Holy Spirit that Jobe had passed. I came home to find this web page about today's service, exactly 24 hours before it began. As I began to watch the service with tears in my eyes, I heard Jobe's voice: "You don't have to worry about me, brother Chris, 'cause I'm alright. I'm alright." Exactly how he would say it.

Indeed, I know that Jobe is alright, living with our Lord Jesus Christ.

Thank you to Jobe's wonderful family for allowing me to view this beautiful ceremony via webcast. You are in my heart forever. - Chris Wells “ Jobe, You were too funny and a man who loved spending time with what I call "Sherri kids"! May you rest in peace as the Jones family tries to navigate life without you. Shasherri and her kids has another forever angel! Rest with ease, in grace and love.

“Dad, I miss you soooooooooo much. I cry everyday 😞. I miss those 7am calls, I miss the “haggie Maggie” jokes about my hair, I miss you complaining about me not having gas in my car, I miss the time you made for your grandkids, Dad I miss EVERYTHING about you 😞. Thank you for being the best Dad you knew how to be. The laughs we shared and the stories you told will forever be cherished. This hurts so much writing this but I’m glad your not suffering anymore. I love you dad until we meet again. 💔🕊️ LLJobeJones

“Hey Dad, MAY YOU REST IN PEACE - Tell my big brother Joe "I love & miss him" - Joe Joe is doing an awesome job with the arrangements; you would be so proud of him. Shasherri can't stop crying, Richard is strong, Boobie is calm as usual, Warren sends his love and for me, just glad we had a chance to really talk, share and cry in your last days, I miss those Sunday morning visits at my house, I love you much, you are truly missed - Your daughter "Josette Michelle Jones"
