“ Mother I remember so many good things about you. You are my long lost friend and mentor. Your daughter finally confessed to me what I've known over the years she isn't my mother. The lady at the public health department helped them break the news to me and I have wondered if I was going to get over being shocked and lonely because of this. Because she used me to fight off her abused husband I was sad. I wrote quite a bit about this over the last few years and I can now understand she may have been and/or was probably adopted. I forgave you first and foremost for keeping me his from me for more than forty years. It's not easy to be this lonely. I needed closure and found this memorial to you. I hope you're ready this no matter where you are, either here or heaven. I just wanted closure. I don't hate Hispanics for making out like this in my life I just feel you shouldn't have done these awful things to me in Indy or when I went away to college. Please read this aloud and pray for the forgiveness of this for all of us. Please know, I am not a mother or wife or housewife. I really want that, and I want to work from our home office and watch over someone else's teenagers and build and grow praise and worship churches. I know I'll have to move, but I could move back. I don't want people to look down on me. I know things are getting better and I am too. Thank you Homeless Neighbors!!! I fell on these hard times and disembarked from bad guys, I may have even gained some new friends. Please pray for me, and I'll pray for you...God Bless you, Love Trice

It is hard to believe that my sister AMF prayer partner is now in the presence of the Lord. I'm going to miss out conversations or prayers together. I will miss hearing her say "God is good ain't He". Rest on my sister.
