“ On this day one year ago, I woke up to the news that you had departed this earth...I was cool at first until I broke down with tears and pain in my heart. But to know that your suffering was over made it all better. I miss you and love you sooo much!!! You were LOUD and had such an original voice and laugh, that only a person like you could have! If you didn't get cursed out or called a name by this man...he didn't love you LOL. Until we meet again...I LOVE YOU GRANDDAD and may your soul rest on...

“ The lives of your legacy you left behind remain here to remember you today and always. A lot of good has happened since you closed your eyes which comforts me in knowing that God had a better deal waiting for you with him. The Giants won the superbowl and I'm sure they put you off in your own side of Heaven just so they wouldn't have to hear your mouth and watch you do your your dancing. Your life has forever changed mine and although we were different we were so much alike and I see so much of you in me.

“ Today is your 64th birthday and I still hear you calling people before they get around to calling you saying, "Let me hear it..." Happy Birthday. I love you and I smile for me and lives you leave behind but are watching over. Your legacy is eternal.
