“ I remember my bed friend Quinton day if this promotion/graduation day . And he had to work that day and came to see me when he got off . It was at 6pm.im.counting down like Quinton it's in 45 mins. He ain't wanna go cause it was live . We both went to his crib and his family put congrats banners outside the door . And he was so happy , he said aw"they cared " with the biggest beautiful smile . And he hung my card up . I love him so much because he was my only friend who gets me and I gets him. My whole family loves him , even the dogs and my niece. He was an angel .

“ Quinton was and will always be a brother to me. Since meeting him in the summer of 2004, we were practically inseparable for the next decade. No matter how far apart we drifted as we attempted to navigate life in our own way, there are no words to describe the hollowness a friend feels to hear news like this. However, as painful as this may be, we will all be there for a final send off. I love you always bro. We all do...
