

Virgil Nestfield

September 13, 1950 - April 16, 2006

Peacefully, on Sunday, April 16, 2006, Virgil Nestfield went home to be with Our Lord.

Born on September 13, 1950 in Washington, DC, Virgil was the youngest child of the late Tenell and Arthur Nestfield. As a youngster he was given the name of "Nerk" by his older brother. He was affectionately called that name by the family for the rest of his life.

Virgil expressed a burning desire to become one of God's faithful. He fulfilled that desire when he accepted Christ into his life and united in fellowship with Fort Foote Baptist Church, Fort Washington, Maryland.

After attending the District of Columbia public schools, he enlisted in the United States Army. Returning home after a three-year stint in the service, he gained employment with the Department of Justice. He worked there for thirty-five years until he retired in 2006.

Virgil's passion was tinkering with "anything electronic". This passion turned into gold as he became a highly skilled, self-taught computer technician.

When ill health took a toll on Virgil's ability to care for himself, a loving angel, Jacklyn Morgan his friend of twenty years stepped in and with much love and devotion, cared for him until he drew his last breath.

He leaves to cherish his memory, two sons, Keith Robinson and Jonathan Fenwick; sister, Velma Smith; brother, Clyde Wright Willie Mae; devoted and caring friend, Jacklyn Morgan; uncle and aunt, Henry and Carrie Parker; five grandchildren, one great-grandchild, nine nieces, four nephews and a host of other relatives and friends.

“ Virgil and I worked together at the Department of Justice. Virgil always had the best smile and the most cheerful disposition. Once, when we were talking, I told him how my little brother was a big sports fan. He never forgot that and always asked about him. Virgil brightened up everyone's day. He will be missed.

“ I worked with Virgil on numerous occasions in recent years, as he would patiently teach me how to produce bound copies of my briefs for filing in the federal Circuit Courts. He was a true professional and a perfectionist of the highest caliber. We would laugh together when I would refer to myself as his "apprentice," as I learned the secrets of his mighty machines. To Virgil, every copy had to be perfect; if there were a problem, he would patiently redo the entire run. Virgil was a patient, amiable, and valued colleague, and I shall miss him dearly.
