“ To: Wayne E. Calhoun

Love entered in my heart one day

A sad, unwelcome guest.

But when it begged that it might stay

I let it stay and rest.

By: J. Cooper

I met you when I was seventeen and again four years ago at age 53.

You were 19, witty, brilliant, tall, brown, and handsome. I am among many who will miss you dearly. My condolences and prayers go out to Brandon, Micheal, your father Melvin, and other members of your family. Rest in peace my gentle giant of a man.

I met Wayne at Lewis College in 1971 and fell madly in love with him. When I returned from Spain, I wanted to marry him but he wasn't ready. Approximately nine months later he asked me, and I wasn't ready. In 2008, we met again after thirty-six years and he was still the same loveable, kind, gentle, man I knew way back then. He was so proud that he was going to be a grandfather and showed me the Washington Red Skin booties he purchased for her. Brandon and Micheal he wanted to make up for all the time he didn't spend with you and he had big plans. Wayne loved you guys dearly. May God bless and keep you strong guys. This man will be missed by everyone.
